This workbook belongs to:

My helper: _____ Started: _____

Includes illustrated words, short-vowel practice, review games and an answer guide. Print the pages you need and practise again whenever you like.

A little practice every day

For parents, teachers and learners: aim for a calm, encouraging session.

1. Look and listen

Point to the letter. Ask a confident Arabic reader or your course audio to model its name and sound.

2. Trace, then try

Trace the light-grey models. Follow the rows from right to left. Copy the dark models, then try without a model.

3. Notice and say

Find the dots. Say each short-vowel sound. Name the picture together; reading the whole word is an extra challenge.

4. Finish with encouragement

Circle your favourite attempt. Stop before hands become tired. A few careful minutes are enough.

Helpful notes

Use a pencil and a comfortable grip. A helper can demonstrate pen strokes; the printed models are tracing guides, not numbered stroke-order diagrams. Start on the right side of each practice row.

Print on A4 paper at Actual size / 100%. For US Letter, choose Fit. Single-sided printing gives younger learners a flat writing surface. This is a paper workbook, not a digitally fillable PDF.

English spellings are memory aids, not exact pronunciation. Picture words use pause forms: final grammatical case endings are omitted. Some picture words contain marks and joining patterns introduced later.

Meet the 28 letters

Get your pencil ready

Start at the right. Follow the light-grey shapes, then draw your own.

Tall lines

Soft curves

Small bowls

Loops and dots

These are warm-up shapes, not Arabic letters. Relax your hand. Try making the shapes in the air before writing on paper.

Alif and the little hamza

A helper page: plain alif and the short starter sounds are not the same thing.

ا

Plain alif often helps make a long ā sound. It does not by itself stand for all three short vowel sounds.

Arabic	Name / reading	What to notice
هَمْزَة	hamzah	A small catch in the voice.
أَ	a	Hamza on alif + fatha.
أُ	u	Hamza on alif + damma.
إِ	i	Hamza below alif + kasra.

Try these with a helper

أَ أَ إِ

There are other seats for hamza. You will meet those later. For now, notice the small hamza and the vowel mark.

Tiny marks, short sounds

Keep the three vowel sounds short. Point to the mark before you say the sound.

بَ	fatḥah (fatha) Short a sound	فَتْحَة
بُ	ḍammah (damma) Short u sound	ضَمَّة
بِ	kasrah (kasra) Short i sound	كَسْرَة

Circle the matching sound in each row.

1	بُ	ba / bu / bi
2	تِ	ta / tu / ti
3	مِ	ma / mu / mi
4	نَ	na / nu / ni
5	سِ	sa / su / si
6	لَ	la / lu / li

Look at the dots

Look at the model on the right. Circle the same letter in its row.

1	A ت	B ث	C ب	ب
2	A ح	B ج	C خ	ج
3	A ر	B د	C ذ	ذ
4	A ش	B س	C ص	ش
5	A ص	B ظ	C ض	ض
6	A ف	B ق	C ن	ق

Extra challenge: tell a helper how the dots change the letter. A dot is part of the letter; a short-vowel mark is different.

Picture-letter detectives

Name each picture with a helper. Circle the letter its Arabic name starts with.

For the lion, choose plain alif as the alphabet letter. The word itself starts with hamza on alif, as shown on page 5.

A first look at joining

Optional extra: letters can look different when they join inside a word.

Arabic words run from right to left. Many letters join to the next letter on the left. The six letters below do not join onward to the next letter on their left; most can still connect from the right.

ا	د	ذ	ر	ز	و
Alif	Daal	Dhaal	Raa	Zaay	Waaw

Meet one word

Arabic	Say it	Meaning
بَاب	bāb	door

The first baa joins to alif. The alif does not join onward to the last baa. The final baa stands separately. Watch a helper copy the word, then trace it.

بَاب بَاب بَاب بَاب

Copy the word here

This workbook mainly practises isolated letters. Full joined-letter handwriting needs more guided practice; do not join letters by simply drawing lines between isolated shapes.

My extra practice page

Choose any letter. Ask a helper to write one clear model in the box.

My model

Letter name: _____

Date: _____

Write from right to left. Take your time.

Something I noticed: _____

Answers and helper notes

Use the answers after trying. A correction is another chance to learn.

Letter detectives on pages 5-32

Numbers refer to the small labels below each choice, counted left to right. The reading and writing practice itself still runs right to left.

Transliteration: ā, ī and ū are long vowels; doubled letters show a doubled consonant. ḥ, ṣ, ḍ, ṭ and ẓ distinguish particular Arabic sounds. ʿ marks ayn. The ending -ah is a pause-form reading of the feminine ending. A teacher or reliable audio model is still important.

Original practice design and existing course illustrations: Dar Al Hamd. Arabic font: Amiri (SIL Open Font License). Reference for vowel marks: University of Victoria, Introduction to Written Arabic - https://hcmc.uvic.ca/eol/arabic/vowels/vowels_pres.htm

Look how much I have tried!

A celebration of practice, curiosity and small steps.

This celebrates

for exploring the Arabic alphabet, noticing the shapes and dots, and taking time to practise.

One letter I feel proud of:

Date: _____ Helper: _____

This page celebrates effort. It is not a pronunciation test or formal qualification. Keep learning at your own pace.
